Agents hit the slopes

SNO’N’Ski Holidays, along with several of its partners, recently hosted six agents on a famil trip exploring two ski resorts in British Columbia, Canada.

The journey began at the Kimberley Alpine Resort, where agents stayed at Trickle Creek, enjoying direct ski-in, ski-out access to 1,800 acres of terrain.

They spent a full day on the slopes before heading out for dinner at Buckhorn and Main Mountain Eatery. Next, the group headed to Fernie Alpine Resort, where they enjoyed a guided mountain tour and snowshoeing.

The advisors stayed at Lizard Creek Lodge, which boasts ski-in, ski-out access, as well as outdoor hot tubs with mountain views.

The final day saw the agents hit the slopes before spending the afternoon wandering through downtown Fernie, wrapping up with dinner at Cirque. “I loved how laid-back Fernie was,” Sno’N’Ski host Marty said. “It’s the perfect option for people who want plenty of terrain and not too many people - on the average weekends there is still three acres of terrain per person,” one of the participants shared. JM
